Closing Session I – 21.6.2023 - 12:00h

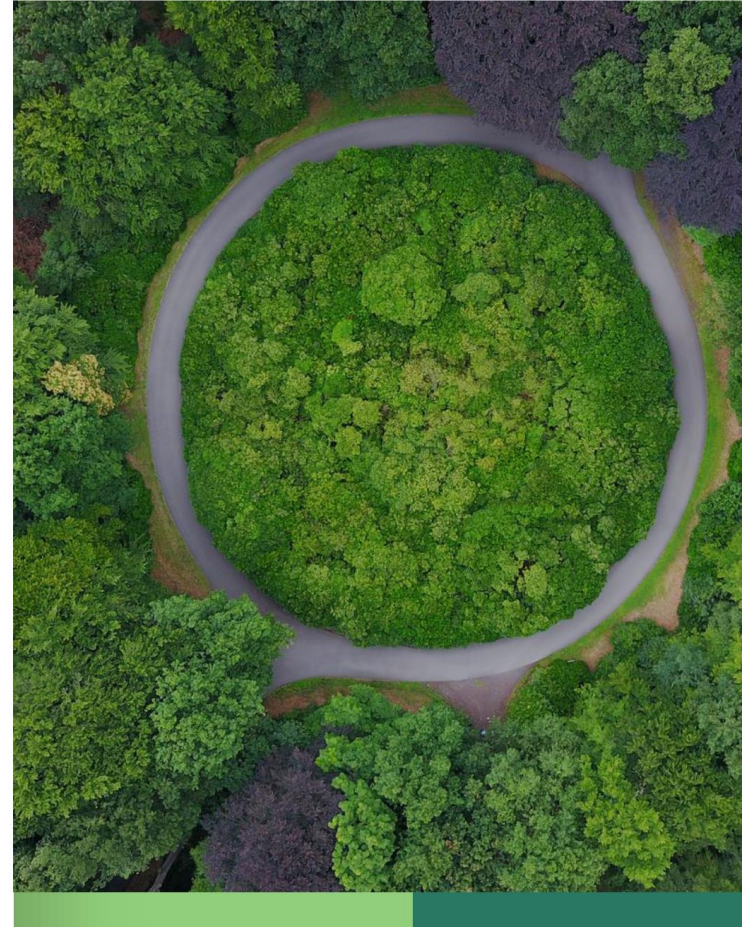

Wrap up and outlook

Terrific good news...

You can promote SSPH+ researchers as nominees for...

Frontiers Planet Prize
2nd edition:
Science for a Sustainable Planet

3 prizes will be awarded (1 Mio. CHF each)

Who can be nominated?

- Nomination is based on ONE PUBLICATION (published in any journal with peer-review) that fulfills the planet prize criteria
- «accepted» any time since 1.11.2021
- Nominee is ONE co-authoring scientist (the «leading brain» behind the publication (can be any authorship position))

The criteria

The Frontiers Planet Prize wants to honour:

Research that advances insights, approaches, and scalable solutions

Research that has the potential breakthrough applications to reduce or reverse planetary imbalances

Research that explicitly connects several planetary boundaries

Research that explores interaction between multiple planetary boundaries will be prioritized.

Coordination of SSPH+ call for nominations

SSPH+ Coordinator:

Emily Reeves

ereeves@ssphplus.ch

With ever-changing challenges and growing expectations, the question remains - how can we better prepare PhD students to become the academic leaders of tomorrow?

Join Swiss TPH, the Swiss School of Public Health, PhD students, and public health specialists to discuss the innovations and challenges of PhD programmes today, and celebrate Prof. em. Nino Künzli's energetic commitment to strengthening PhD education.

Nino Künzli, Prof. em.
Swiss TPH and
University of Basel

Topics will include:

- PhD education today and tomorrow
- Innovative graduate school models
- Prerequisites for careers in global health
- Becoming academic leaders in diverse settings
- PhD student panel discussion
