LECTURE AND DISCUSSION SERIES ON PRIME TOPICS OF PUBLIC HEALTH

How are new data sources forming public health research?
How do law and health interact? What challenges does public health face – and what solutions does it offer?

Crisp and interactive talks followed by student-led discussion will reflect these and other novel and challenging topics.

This lecture series is designed for students of medicine and health sciences (including those with no background in public health) as well as all interested.

Information, links to reading materials, live streaming and recorded lectures can be found here:

The "This is Public Health (TIPH)" - Europe is the ASPHER-led campaign, available to Association's members and organized in partnership between ASPHER and ASPPH. It is aimed at communicating the importance of Public Health as a field, a well-solicited career path and showing the impact possibilities concerning population health.
